Hi, Peach. Look at this exercise closely, and see if you can understand the correction.

And here are the rules:

1. In a sentence, two simple-present-tense verbs can not walk together directly, the second one needs to change to its present/past participle form.

2. The form of this kind of sentence is like this: Modal Verb (like can/may/must...) + be + Verb's Participle Tense
情态动词+ be动词 + 动词过去分词1. Future cars must be design (must/design) to conserve energy.2. A house can be built (can/build) to conserve energy.3. Clothes can be made (can/make) from recycled water bottles.4. Energy may be conserved (may/conserve) by recycling.4 Read. Circle True or False.

Found Art

We often think of reusing and recycling as something we just have to do. But some people see it as a chance to create. Any object can be reused to make something amazing.

Using found stuff to make art is not new. Found art became popular in the 1900s. Found art made people think about the things around them in a different way. Many things could be made into art!

Excellent!

Example: People create new things from recycling.

1. Found art is a new kind of art.
2. People can make art from reusing and recycling.
3. All objects must be thrown away.
